55 gallons of blood in the first ten minutes.

Marcus Dunstan and Patrick Melton's sequel to THE COLLECTOR is, as you might hope, bloody as shit. Before you visit The Collector's hotel of horrors at the end of the month, director Dunstan outlines all manner of violence you can expect in the film's featurette, "Gore Factor."

Additionally, the film has launched an app on Facebook in which you can step into the shoes of the serial killer and assemble the limbs of your friends how you see fit.

"When Elena's (Emma Fitzpatrick) friends take her to a secret party at an undisclosed location, she never imagined she would become the latest victim of The Collector, a psychopathic killer. The Collector kidnaps and transports her to an abandoned hotel he's transformed into his own private maze of torture and death. Upon learning of his daughter's disappearance, Elena's wealthy father (Christopher McDonald) hires a group of mercenaries to retrieve her from the vicious grips of The Collector. These mercenaries coerce Arkin (Josh Stewart), the only man to have escaped the wrath of this heinous monster, to lead them through the gruesome labyrinth. Now, Arkin finds himself fighting for his own life in order to save Elena."

THE COLLECTION is out November 30. For more on the film, read Fango's review and keep an eye out for many words with the filmmakers. Below, you can also get a look at what to expect FX-wise from the FANGORIA's Blood & Guts episode with designer Gary Tunnicliffe.

{youtube}BDQTefYT58I{/youtube}

{youtube}tcvVgu1h_wY{/youtube}