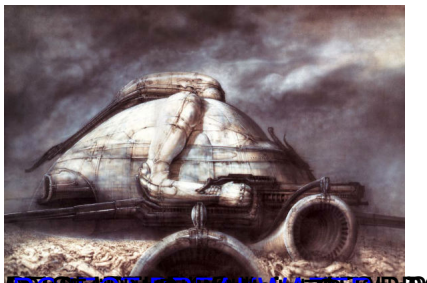
Written by Samuel Zimmerman
Friday, 15 June 2012 12:21

Despite coming up shy of many audiences' expectations, PROMETHEUS is still on the mind. Below, catch a newly revealed still that hints at the Engineers' heritage and Lianne Spiderbaby and her Fright Bytes' review of the film.

Prometheus Forum collected a slew of making-of photos from the film's stunning creation-of-life opening sequence that reveal an "Elder Engineer," if you will. Previously rumored, the photo confirms the presence of those who created them who created us. Is it possible they're now being saved for the proposed sequel Ridley Scott wants/sets up for?

For much more, including some amazing looks at the makeup FX of the Engineers, head over to Prometheus Forum .


Sticking on the design end of things, Badass Digest has an insanely cool write-up on PROMETHEUS' utilization of some of H.R. Giger's original designs for Alejandro Jodorowsky's sadly non-existent DUNE, which brought him together with ALIEN scripter and genre titan Dan O'Bannon in the 70s. You can get the lowdown on all of that here .