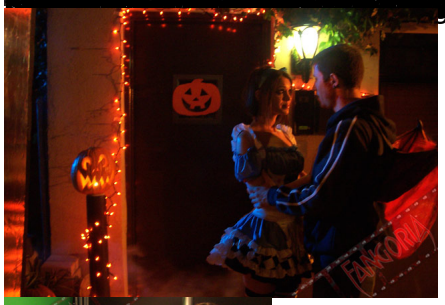
Written by Michael Gingold
Saturday, 22 October 2011 03:20

We first told you here about NIGHT OF THE PUMPKIN, a new Halloween horror short about a demonically possessed jack-o’lantern. Fango will be bringing you the exclusive premiere of PUMPKIN this coming week, and we also visited the set, from which we brought back exclusive photos and comments from the creators.

NIGHT OF THE PUMPKIN was directed by BLOOD NIGHT: THE LEGEND OF MARY HATCHET’s Frank Sabatella (pictured in 2nd photo below at left with FX artist Jeremy Selenfriend) for Sideshow Pictures, and he tells us, “What inspired the flick was Halloween itself; we just wanted to make a cool seasonal short for the fans this year. Normally, Sideshow Pictures would produce short content and ID spots for the New York City Horror Film Festival, but this year, due to the untimely passing of the festival’s founder and our good friend Michael Hein, there is no fest. Which totally blows, but in the spirit of the fest and of the season, we still wanted to put something together!”

[redacted]



[redacted]

[redacted]

Kickstarter page [redacted] Facebook page [redacted]