New York! October is over, but FANGORIA and Brooklyn's Nitehawk Cinema have the perfect cure for your Halloween hangover.

Nitehawk (136 Metropolitan Ave, Williamsburg) holds down three levels of movie love (theater, lobby and downstairs cafe), and every Monday at 8 p.m., the Downstairs Cafe dips into their expansive VHS Vault.

For November, Fango's on board, co-presenting the month's weekly imbibing in cinema and beer. I'll be there, alongside Nitehawk's top notch programmer Caryn Coleman and we'll get weird with "Family Values," culinary kills, holiday horror, trivia and giveaways!

Here's the lineup and trailer! Expect reminders and Fango Flashbacks on the films in the coming weeks! For much more head to Nitehawk's VHS Vault .

• Monday, November 5 BLOOD FEAST (1963)

Herschell Gordon Lewis' gore-fest tells the tale of a food caterer who kills for cuilinary inclusions and for ritual sacrifice.

• Monday, November 12 BLOOD FREAK (1972)

When a Vietnam-vet eats experimental turkey-meat he goes from earning extra money to sucking the blood out of innocent Florida victims.

• Monday, November 19 HOME SWEET HOME (1981)

Arguably the first Thanksgiving horror movie, a mental patient goes all Michael Myers by stealing a station wagon and returning home to ruin a family holiday.

• Monday, November 26 DON'T OPEN 'TIL CHRISTMAS

We'll ease on into the Christmas spirit with a serial killer in a Santa suit stalking naked ladies in London and confusing Scotland Yard.
