After Dark Films just sent along the skinny on PROWL, the first of eight features in the After Dark Originals series it's producing in conjunction with Lionsgate and the Syfy channel (and which we first reported on here). The company also sent along a couple of pics from the flick.

Directed by Patrick Syversen from a script by Tim Tori, PROWL stars Bruce Payne (from NECRONOMICON, WARLOCK III: THE END OF INNOCENCE and numerous other genre fare), Courtney Hope and Saxon Trainor. The synopsis is as follows:

"Amber dreams of escaping her small town and persuades her friends to accompany her apartment-hunting in the big city. When their transportation breaks down, Amber and friends gratefully accept a ride in the back of a semi. But when the driver refuses to stop and they discover the cargo is cartons of blood, they panic. Soon, panic turns to terror when the truck disgorges into a dark, abandoned warehouse where bloodthirsty creatures learn to hunt human prey, which the friends realize is what they have now become..."

A co-production between Britain and Bulgaria, PROWL was executive-produced by After Dark's Courtney Solomon and produced by Chris Milburn, Borislav Rangelov, Lucy Mukerjee, Michael Klein, Christopher D'Elia and Zachary Bryan. D'Elia, of co-producing entity Dobré Films, says, "Dobré jumped at the opportunity to produce PROWL with a company that has set the bar for branding and creating unique and great horror films. PROWL and all the new Originals will be a great addition to an already celebrated brand and won't disappoint." Fans will be able to find out
