Filmmaker David Lynch is tackling a new medium, making his solo debut as a musical artist this fall with CRAZY CLOWN TIME.

Produced and written by Lynch, the album's 14 original songs spotlight him on guitar and vocals and will be released on November 8 by independent British label Sunday Best Recordings/PIAS in America.

CRAZY CLOWN TIME will be available for purchase at retail outlets in both physical and digital formats, including a Collector's Edition CD, iTunes exclusive with video and a double LP set with bonus tracks.

Through the years, Lynch has collaborated frequently with others on various musical projects—composer Angelo Badalamenti (TWIN PEAKS), Polish pianist Marek Zebrowski (INLAND EMPIRE), plus Sparklehorse and Danger Mouse (DARK NIGHT OF THE SOUL). CRAZY CLOWN TIME, however, marks the first time Lynch steps into the spotlight alone.

"The love of experimenting with sound and music is what's driving this boat," Lynch explains. "All of the songs on the album started as a jam. The jams eventually found a form and lyrics appeared."

Lynch recorded CRAZY CLOWN TIME over several months at his own Asymmetrical Studio with engineer Dean Hurley, who contributes guitar and drums to several songs. The recording process, Lynch recalls, was filled with happy creative accidents. "There were so many accidents; this album should be in the hospital." The result is a collection of dark songs Lynch
