

Space jockey suits! New "PROMETHEUS" photo!

Written by Samuel Zimmerman
Monday, 16 January 2012 11:09

---

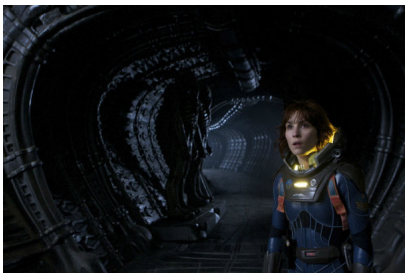

The latest photo from PROMETHEUS continues to showcase awe-struck actors, but there's something revealing in the background.

The LA Times spoke to PROMETHEUS and LOST writer Damon Lindelof and while the talk isn't incredibly in-depth, the image premiered adds a yet another piece to the puzzle. Behind star Noomi Rapace are some shadowy figures that seem to confirm that the Space Jockey from the first film was merely in a suit; something Ridley Scott has previously hinted at.

Lindelof also spoke to PROMETHEUS grandeur, saying, "The movie is definitely epic in its scope. One of the filmmakers that we ended up talking about to a fair degree of redundancy was David Lean, who directed 'LAWRENCE OF ARABIA. We wanted to make the movie feel big by having the characters be small in big spaces. That connected to the larger themes we were talking about — that we're all just these little gnats crawling around on our little planet."

While I doubt I want to see any more from the film (save some surprises!), every bit shown fuels the excitement fire. PROMETHEUS is out June 8.

{youtube}sftuxbvGwiU{/youtube}