We just received a box of Japanese sex cinema in the mail today; the fine folks over at Synapse Films/Impulse Pictures sent over copies of EROS SCHOOL: FEELS SO GOOD to give away to a few Fango fans. I was very intrigued to read on the cover that it was “one of the most offensive and controversial Nikkatsu films ever made”—so of course I had to give it a watch.

I can safely say this may actually be one of the most offensive films I have ever seen. And I watch some really heinous shit. A high-school rapist, beatings and bad boys...oh yeah, and this one is not horror. It is a comedy. A sleazy, slimy, vulgar little comedy. The synopsis: “Ryu, a sinister transfer student with a dark past, sexually assaults his way through his nubile female classmates to his ultimate conquest, the leggy athletic champ and class president Misa. Tadao, a fellow classmate, is also in love with Misa and wants to take her virginity for himself. The big Eros High School track meet is happening soon. Will these two boys ruin her chance of winning? What strange secret is Misa hiding from everyone? Why is Ryu prancing around in a banana hammock with a pet pig?”

Intrigued? You should be, and possibly disturbed as well. But you still want a copy of EROS SCHOOL, right? Of course you do!
