We're just under a month away from one of fandom's most epic events and Fango is returning this year, co-sponsoring the must-attend horror bash of the Con!

That's right, FANGORIA is set to get rad, alongside genre colleagues Dread Central and Shock Till You Drop and Dark Sky Films and Capcom, as we collectively help sponsor FEARnet's Con of the Dead. If you're in San Diego, here's all you can expect, fittingly, on Friday the 13th of next month:

FEARnet, the leading cable destination for horror, thriller and suspense content, will team with Capcom® and its upcoming Resident Evil® 6 video game and MPI's Dark Sky Films to celebrate the horror genre at Comic-Con this year, hosting "Con-of-the Dead," an evening party saluting both fans and industry insiders alike. This invitation-only party will fittingly take place Friday, July 13, at San Diego's Gothic-inspired Voyeur nightclub from 6:00 to 8:30 PM PT. "Con-of-the-Dead" guests will experience an interactive event complete with playable demo stations featuring Resident Evil 6, a VIP suite decked out by Dark Sky Films, music spun by LA's DJ Amanda Jones, go-go ghouls dancers, customized refreshments, and 'zombie-fied' photo booth.

FANGORIA Entertainment, Screamfest Horror Film Festival, and horror-centric websites DreadCentral.com and Shocktillyoudrop.com will co-sponsor the event, with other partnerships soon to be announced.

FEARnet will team up with the 6th Annual Zombie Walk: San Diego, where 300 participating zombies will win admittance to FEARnet's "Con-of-the-Dead" party taking place that same evening. The lucky undead winners will be able to enter the event after completing the walk in San Diego's historic Gaslamp District.

Peter Block, President and General Manager of FEARnet, is enthusiastic about the network's inclusion in the Comic-Con festivities. "Our main goal at Comic-Con is to build an event that would allow fans to engage with our network firsthand," Block said. "We are excited for the chance to showcase our network to invited members of the media and entertainment industry, as well as selected participants from San Diego's famous Zombie Walk."

The emerging network, now in more than seven million U.S. homes, is expanding into San Diego on June 30, as part of Cox Communications' continued FEARnet rollout. FEARnet will be viewed on Cox's Movie Pak at channel position 311 prior to the start of the international convention.

"Cox Communications is an important provider for our rapidly growing popular network," said Block. "We're thrilled to be distributed on the third-largest cable company in the U.S. as part of Cox's Movie Pak and exclusively deliver genre-themed content in time for Comic-Con. Residents there have a deep appreciation for the genre, and we're thrilled to be able to bring them over 300 movie titles a year from our robust film library."

In addition, cast members of FEARnet's first original TV series, "Holliston," featuring Adam Green, Joe Lynch, Corri English, Laura Ortiz, and GWAR front man Oderus Urungus, will also be on hand, taking part in a panel presentation hosted by a surprise celebrity.

FEARnet will cover the latest genre news at Comic-Con and continue to produce original content for FEARnet.com, its VOD channel and linear TV network. FEARnet's coverage of Comic-Con is sponsored by Capcom's Resident Evil 6, which will be infecting stores on October 2, 2012, and is currently available for pre-order.
