Danielle Harris' directorial debut AMONG FRIENDS has been making its way around the U.S. fest circuit, and this morning the word came down that it's headed for a couple of prestigious overseas events.

Harris and co. have announced that AMONG FRIENDS will play at Catalunya, Spain's Sitges Film Festival, which runs October 4-14, and Sweden's Lund International Film Festival, which takes place September 20-29. The latter will be the movie's European premiere, and the fest's president Lars Diurlin says, "The LIFFF is honored to present the European Premiere of AMONG FRIENDS, and proud to be able to welcome Danielle Harris and [screenwriter/co-star] Alyssa Lobit to attend this exclusive screening of their truly entertaining, quirky and shocking film full of '80s kitsch and drenched in blood and laughter."

At Sitges, AMONG FRIENDS will play as a Midnite Xtreme feature, with Harris, Lobit and Jennifer Blanc-Biehn (who produced with Athena Lobit and also co-stars) in attendance. "When someone came with the news that Danielle Harris had directed a film, and Jennifer Blanc was starring, all the office shouted, 'You can't get more Sitges than that!' " says Sitges' Mike Hostench. Adds Harris, "I'm thrilled to be premiering my directorial debut at these prestigious international film festivals! Watch out Europe, here we come!"

Also starring Christopher Backus, AJ Bowen, Dana Daurey, Brianne Davis, Kane Hodder, Kamala Jones and Chris Meyer, AMONG FRIENDS is about a dinner party that turns into a staging ground from unveiled secrets and murder. British sales agency Aspect Film picked up worldwide sales rights to the movie for its Chiller Films division, which has already closed a deal for German-speaking Europe with Tiberius Film and will shortly announce a North American distributor.
